

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

—By Blosser

HIS OWN MEDICINE
Come at once, Aunt Mary is dead. Funeral tomorrow at 2 p. m. Henry. That was the urgent message. It was for Emma and her sister. And they had a movie in Hackensack! The sister lived in Orange. They'd go directly home—two hours. I must reach them at once. So I telephoned the theater. Three different voices answered. None waited long enough to hear. It's very important! A death in—before I finished they'd ring off. Operator reported "Don't answer. Keep ringing!" I insisted. "Till you ring some sense in 'em. Even if it takes forever!" So she did. At last he answered. "Say! I ain't got no time for you! Snow's out an' they're just gone. Second show's on now an' I'm busy. Watcha think I yam? A noperator?" Dear Emma and her sister! They were up nearly all night. Confusion and catching trains. It was a shame. I would have wept with rage. But I didn't. I wired him that message.

Waited a half-hour, sent another: "Deliver message sent to E. Mann." It happened he had an Aunt Mary. Most every one has, come to thing. She was rich—lived out in Ohio. He expected a legacy from her. So he dropped everything and ran. He caught the midnight train. No bertha left—sat up all night. Landed in Ohio pale and tired. Aunt Mary met him at the door. He keeled over in a faint. Thought it was her spirit. She thought he'd been dissipating. Later she changed her will. Nobody knew of the telegram. He came home, mad and dejected. The rest of my message was waiting. I called him up sweetly: "Thanks for delivering my wire! How do YOU like it? Remember the Golden Rule. Death might come to your family. Put yourself in our place." I quoted his reply to me: "I ain't got no time for you! He started to say things. Watcha think I yam? A noperator?"

Than I rang off.
Isn't it odd?
Some fellows give bitter medicine.
They hate to swallow it themselves.

Don't Carry All Your Eggs in One Basket

The year of 1921, will soon be upon us, with its potent possibilities, and their attendant responsibilities.

The farmers of the Salt River Valley are facing the necessity for correcting the mistakes of 1920, by arranging to diversify their crops, and practice rotation, so that the soil will be renewed, and not "robbed" by repeated planting of cotton. The dangers of the one crop system of farming have been amply exemplified this year, but there should be no wholesale desertion of cotton growing, nor will there be. The greatest yield of cotton per acre, may be attained through crop rotation and fertilization of the soil.

The farmer, who raises cotton, alfalfa, live-stock, and grain, is not dependant upon the vagaries of the cotton market for a successful year's business. His income is returned at different periods,—the returns from one crop financing the growing of the following crop, and in brief, his business is safer, because he is not "carrying all his eggs in one basket."

Bread

BAKED in family-size loaves, "Pure Milk" Bread has a keeping quality by which it remains fresh and appetizing to the last slice—no waste. That is because in this size the flavor develops better in the baking, due to the longer time the loaf is in the oven, than is possible with a smaller loaf. Buy a loaf today. Note the delicate, golden-brown crust, the snow-white crumb, the even texture, the made-with-milk flavor. Little wonder that big and little children love it and thrive on it.

TIMELY DENTISTRY

We firmly advocate and advise the periodical examination of your teeth for the purpose of discovering those minor defects which, when attended to in time, involve but very little cost. These same minor defects, when neglected, invariably result in a great deal of pain and expense and frequently necessitate the devitalizing of the tooth before it can be filled or crowned. Hence the logical and economical plan is to have your teeth examined at least once every six months by an expert dentist who has the facilities to properly diagnose your dental needs. In these large sanitary suite offices you will find the highest degree of professional skill coupled with the use of the finest materials and the most modern methods. An ever growing number of satisfied men and women attest to the fact that our dentistry is better—the demand for our better dentistry is great enough to enable us to give it for less money.
